BORN OF HOPE

Production Information

Born of Hope is a 60 minute Lord of the Rings inspired film being produced in the UK. A low budget production, the entire cast and crew are giving their services for no financial gain. The subject matter and quality has attracted people from around the world to join the team, even gaining support and interest from some of the original New Line Trilogy cast and crew members including Richard Taylor and the Oscar[™] winning team at Weta Workshop, New Zealand.

Born of Hope is a non-commercial production being created for free internet download for film fans worldwide. It is being made purely for entertainment purposes and to keep the storytelling history of Middle Earth alive.

The trailer and video featurettes from the test shoot in April 2006 have been well received at many conventions and exhibitions around the world and we have a large following anxiously awaiting the release of the finished film.

This project has been around for almost five years, with the original idea forming in 2003 when actor/filmmaker Kate Madison wanted to send a film to a Tolkien Fan Film Exhibition. However, from a small spark the idea grew into a hugely ambitious project and in April 2006 we embarked on a test shoot filming a collection of scenes from the film. The final draft of the script has now been developed and we are in pre-production with principal photography scheduled to take place from July to December 2008 with an estimated release in 2009.

This hour long original drama is set in the time before the War of the Ring and tells the story of the Dúnedain, the Rangers of the North, before the return of the King. Inspired by only a couple of paragraphs written by Tolkien in the appendices of the Lord of the Rings we follow Arathorn and Gilraen, the parents of Aragorn, from their first meeting through a turbulent time in their people's history.

A scattered people, the descendents of storied seakings of the ancient West, struggle to survive in a lonely wilderness. But a dark force relentlessly bends its will toward their destruction. Yet amidst these valiant, desperate people, hope remains. A royal house endures unbroken from father to son.

"The remnant of the Faithful, the Dúnedain the Men of the West -- were scattered now, and few, and beset by many dangers. For unknown to them, though he had lost most of his power, the Dark Lord Sauron had not been destroyed by Isildur during the War of the Last Alliance, and of all the peoples of Middle Earth Sauron held none with more hatred and more fear than the Dúnedain. He spread his will amongst his servants and through the long years sought ever to discover if the Heirs of Isildur yet lived, so that he might destroy them, and the last of his greatest enemies would be lost forever."

Crew Information

Everyone working on this project is not doing it for financial gain but because this is a project they believe in. We are drawing on the talents of many people from around the world and a number of large companies working commercially in the film industry are also assisting us in our efforts to bring this wonderful production to life.

Kate Madison - DIRECTOR/PRODUCER

As an actor/filmmaker Kate has filled a variety of roles both on and off camera including work as a camera assistant, production manager, head of wardrobe, art department and crowd casting on a number of films. Kate has previously directed short films including The Horsemen, an audience favourite at the Stanford Film Festival, and is very much looking forward to directing Born of Hope, her first feature.

Locations

The film revolves around the Dúnedain settlement of Taurdal, which is home to the Chieftain Arador and his son Arathorn. Taurdal is becoming something of a refugee camp as the Dúnedain flee their homes when outer settlements are attacked by Orcs spreading out of the mountains.

West Stow's Reconstructed Anglo-Saxon Village

The village near Bury St Edmunds will be transformed into the fictional Dúnedain settlement of Taurdal for at least two weeks in 2008.

Art and design is a crucial aspect of this historical fantasy because the props and costumes all need to be produced especially for Born of Hope. Our aim is to produce an individual look for each character within this film.

As well as the scenes in Taurdal we also require a number of different landscapes from marshes to forests and mountains through changing seasons. Opposite are some photos of the type of locations found here in the UK.

Funding

Due to copyright law no money can be made from this unlicensed film therefore this is a not for profit production. Everyone working on this project is not doing it for financial gain but despite everyone's generosity and help there are inevitable costs that cannot be avoided.

For an historical fantasy feature film our budget is incredibly low.

Estimated Budget £25,000

We desperately require sponsors to keep this project the high quality production we wish it to remain. All money gained through sponsorship will be put into making this film, guaranteed! We have the challenge of maintaining high production value and quality within the constraints of a low budget but have proved worthy of this challenge on many occasions.

If you would like to see this unique project completed, as many do, then you can support us by becoming a sponsor. On the following page are a number of exciting sponsorship opportunities to suit all tastes and budgets. Alternatively you can contact the Born of Hope Team at funding@bornofhope.com to discuss an alternative proposal.
